Our adventure begins with the man who founded this university, Roger Revelle. Mr. Revelle was a smart man, he studied oceanography which meant he studied the ocean, sea life and the changes that occur due to the weather.

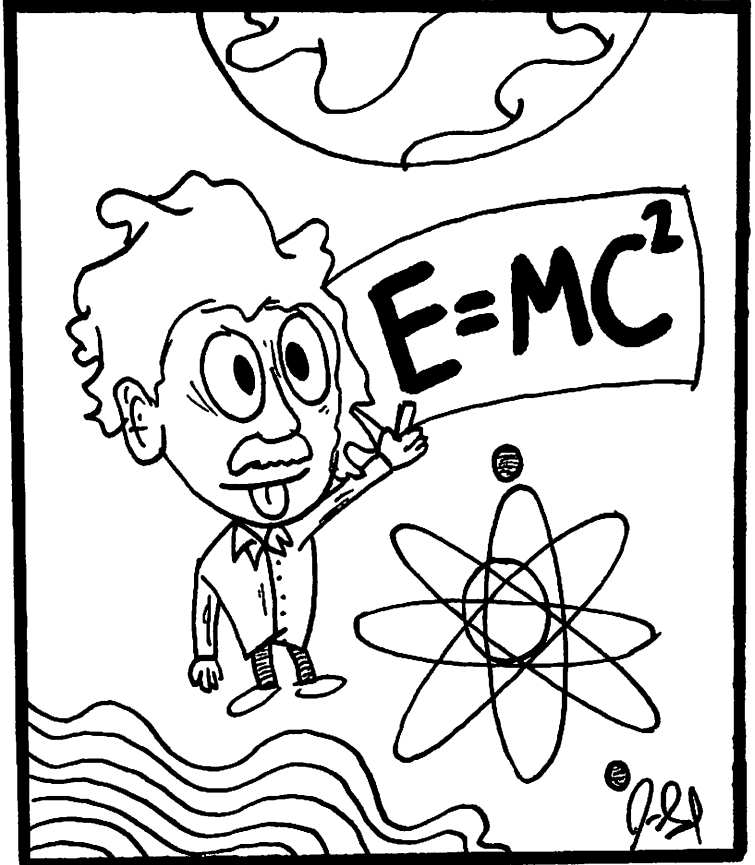

UC San Diego was meant to be just a science and engineering school. However, Revelle decided to allow all subjects but with an emphasis on science and research. Today it is known as one of the top schools for research!

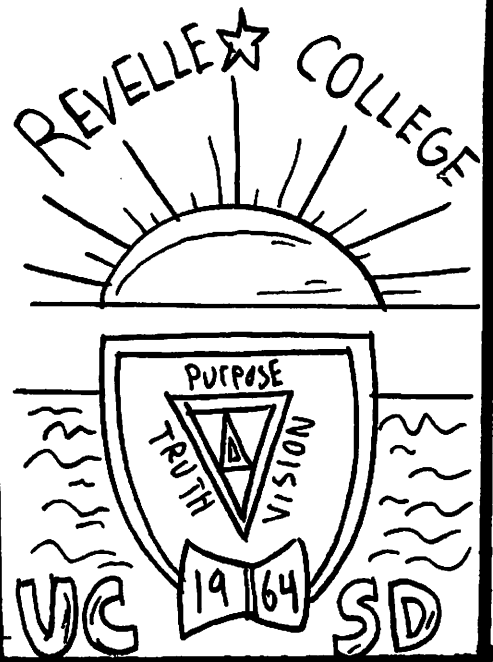

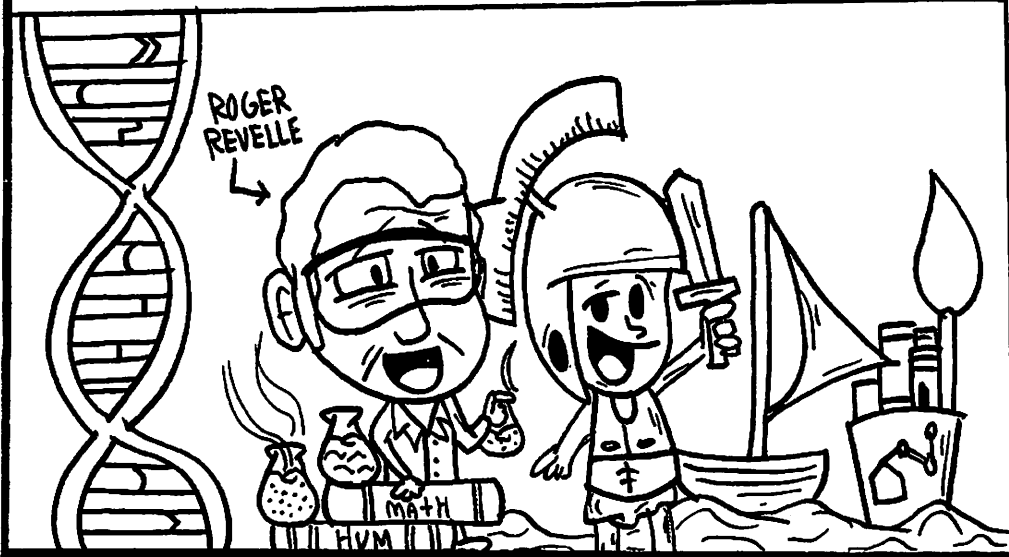

York was a physicist and held many important research and administrative positions. He worked closely with students on numerous research projects.

UC San Diego's 1st chancellor was a man by the name of Herbert York. Today he is considered a visionary founder for his major contributions to the early years of UC San Diego.

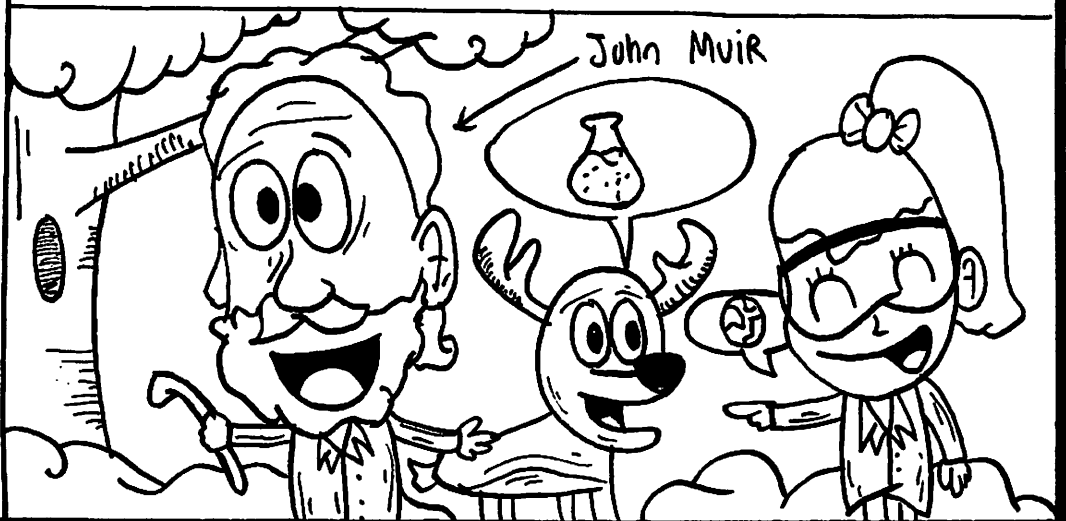

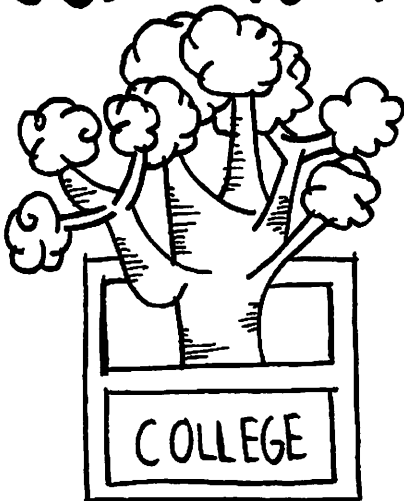

UC San Diego is divided into six different colleges. The First college is Revelle College. It was founded in 1964 and named after Roger Revelle. It focuses on science, math and liberal arts.

JOHN MUIR

The next college is John Muir college founded in 1967. Named after the environmentalist John Muir.

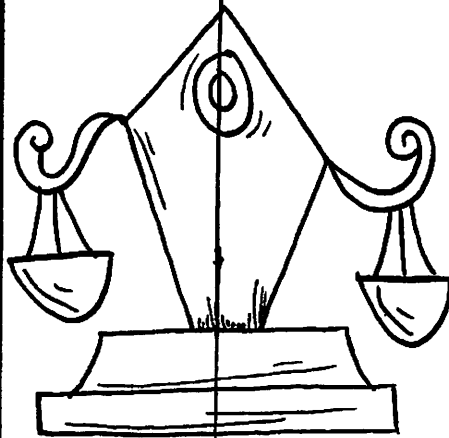

THURGOOD MARSHALL College is the third college founded in 1970. It had a special focus on the understanding of diversity of cultures and social justice. It was named after Thurgood Marshall, the 1st African American Justice.

THURGOOD MARSHALL COLLEGE

The fourth college is Earl Warren college founded in 1974. Named after ex-california governor and chief justice of the U.S. Supreme court, Earl Warren. Its goal is to help students seek a path "toward a life in balance"

TOWARD A LIFE IN BALANCE.

EARL WARREN

Eleanor Roosevelt college was founded in 1988 and named after the 1st lady of the United States (1932-1945), Eleanor Roosevelt. Its focus is to educate students to work effectively in a rapidly changing world.

Theodor Geisel, better known as Dr. Seuss, is a major part of UC San Diego. He created some very famous characters such as the Cat in the Hat.

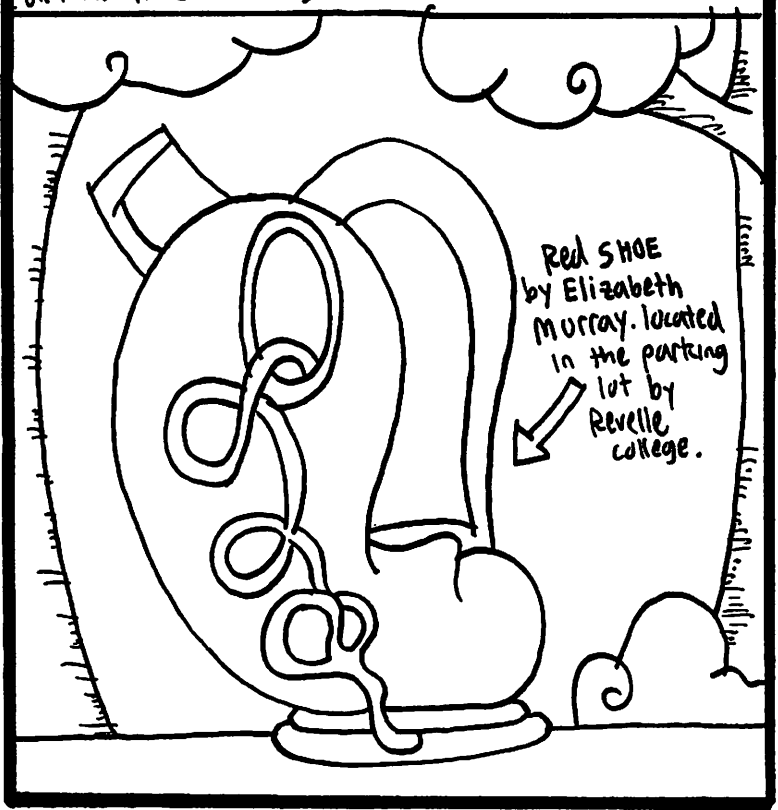

Here at UC San Diego there is an entire part of campus dedicated to Theodor Geisel (Dr. Seuss) and his wife, Audrey Geisel. The main library, Geisel Library, is named after Dr. Seuss and Audrey Geisel.

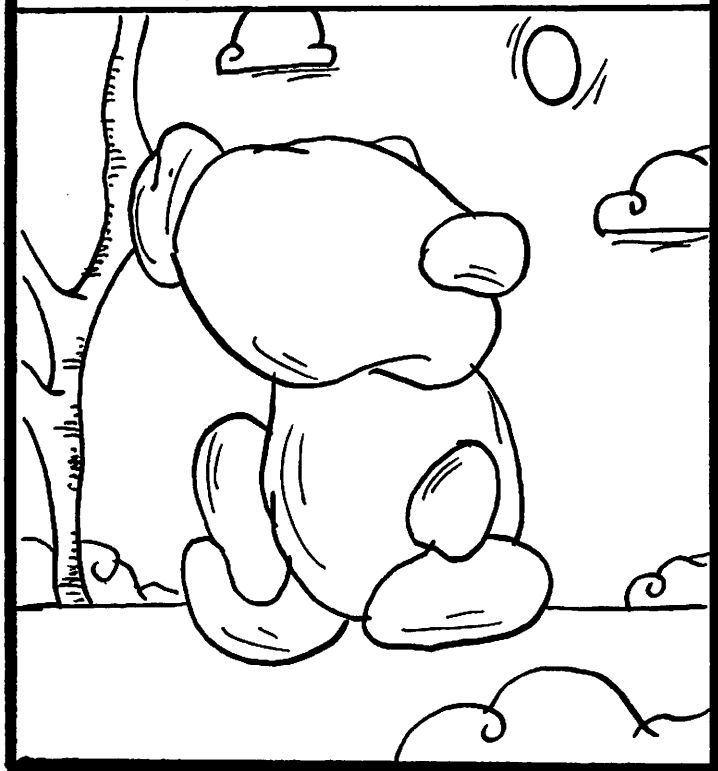

Check this out, it's the snake path that leads to Gessel library. Pretty cool work of art right??

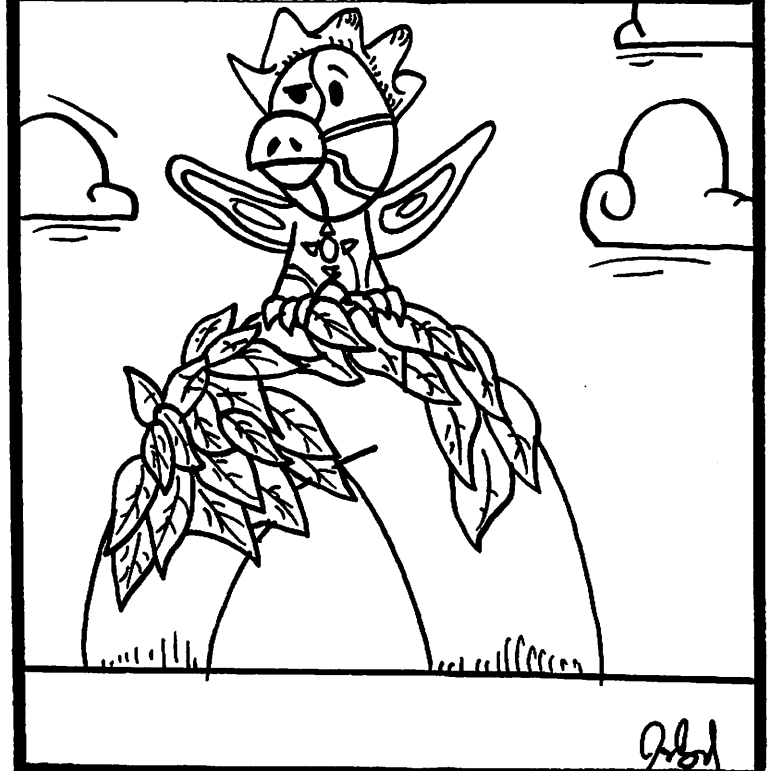

You can see more awesome art like the snake path all over UC San Diego. There are works of art placed around the campus near the colleges and other buildings. They are all a part of the Stuart collection which is a program that allows artists to create big works of art.

Bear by Tim Hawkinson is located by Warren College right next to the engineering buildings.

Sun God by Niki de Saint Phalle is located in Muir college, right next to the AP&M building.

Fallen Star by Do Ho Suh is the newest addition to the Stuart Collection, completed in the Summer of 2012. It is located in Warren College, hanging off of the engineering buildings.

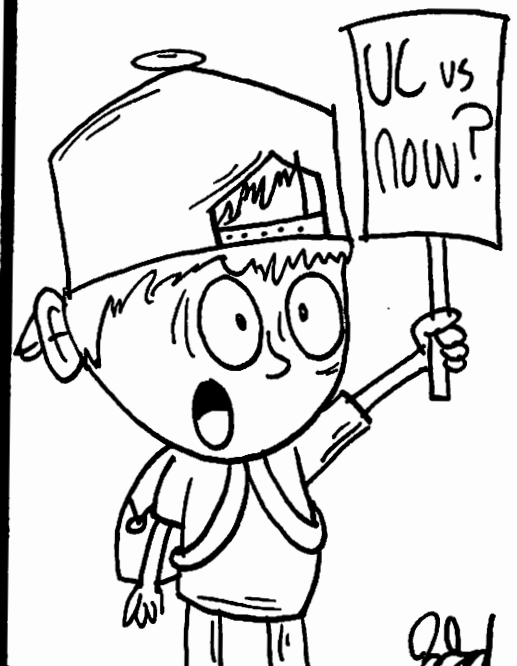

So as you can see UC San Diego is not only the best place to study but also the best place to see Amazing art!!!

One last art piece I want to share is the Chicano legacy Mural by Mario Torero located along the wall of Peterson Hall at Marshall college. It's the 1st ever mural on campus that depicts the history of an under-represented community. The mural depicts many important activists such as César E. Chávez.

The students at UC San Diego have always been very involved with activism, which is the idea of coming together and fighting for a cause they all believe in such as the cost of education.

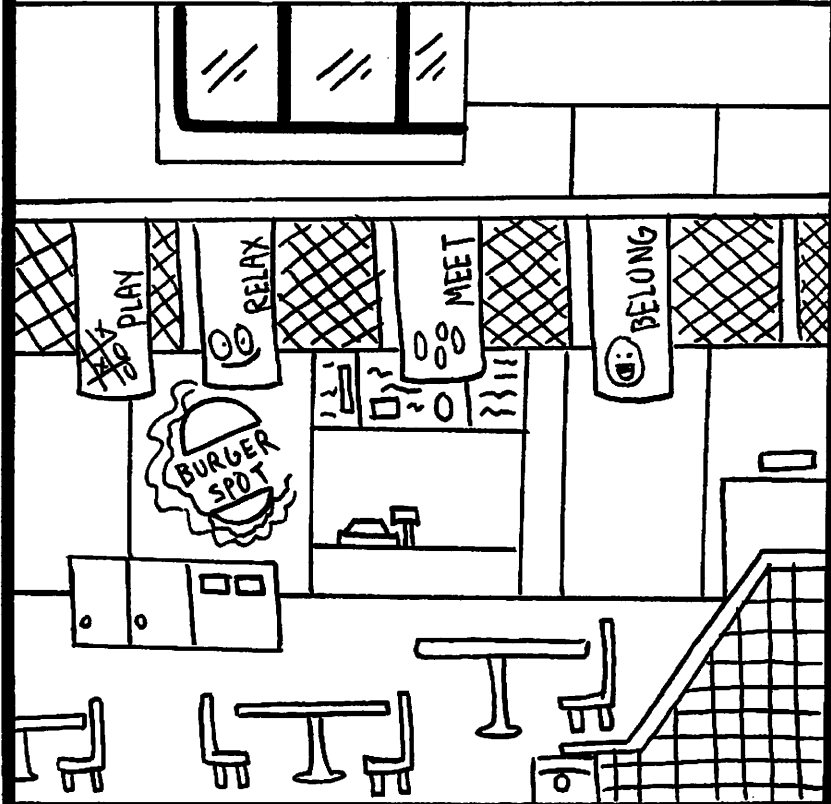

Here at UCSD, there are many clubs for students to be involved in. These organizations can be for fun or community service.

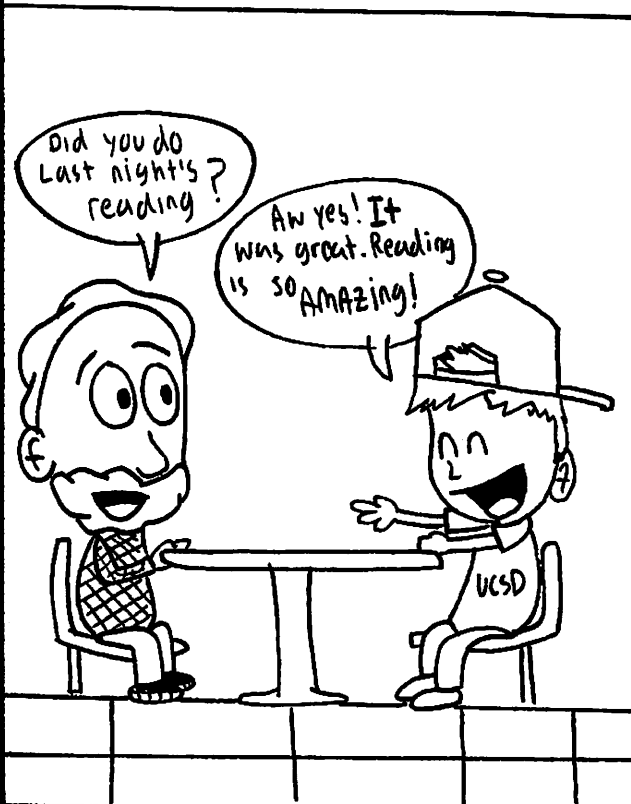

Students at UCSD love to stay active and fit, so many of them go to the gym, or decide to join a sport. UCSD has two gyms: RIMAC and Main Gym. RIMAC is one of the largest gyms in the country and is located near ERC.

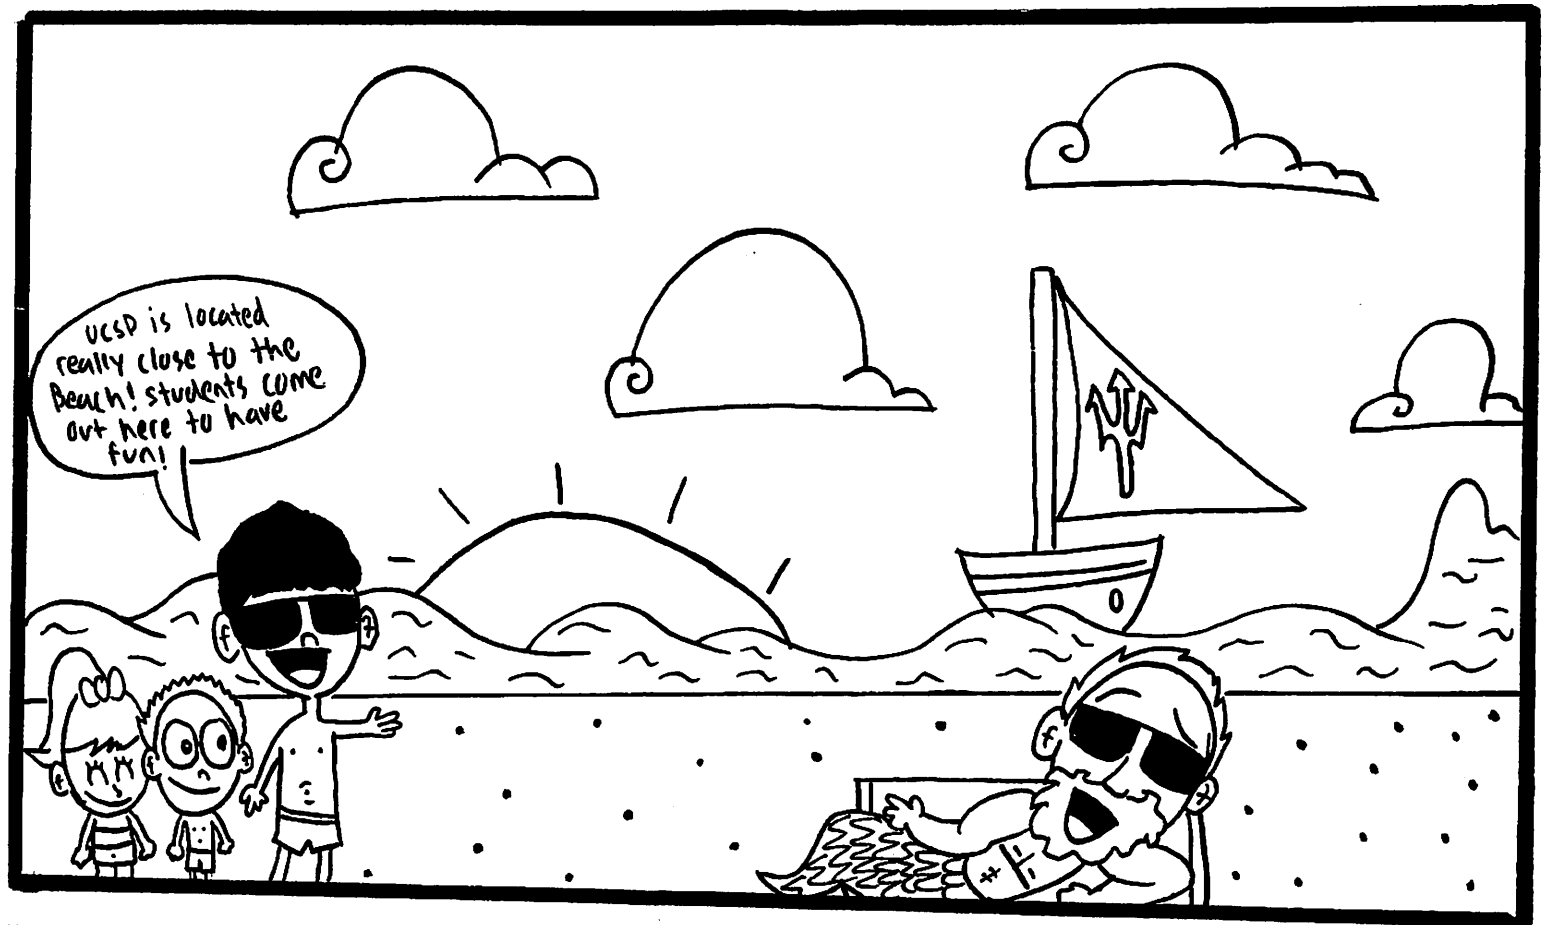

There are many places for students to eat, relax and study. Each of the colleges has lounges for students. But perhaps the most popular spot, is Price Center. It is located at the center of the school. You can eat and study here.

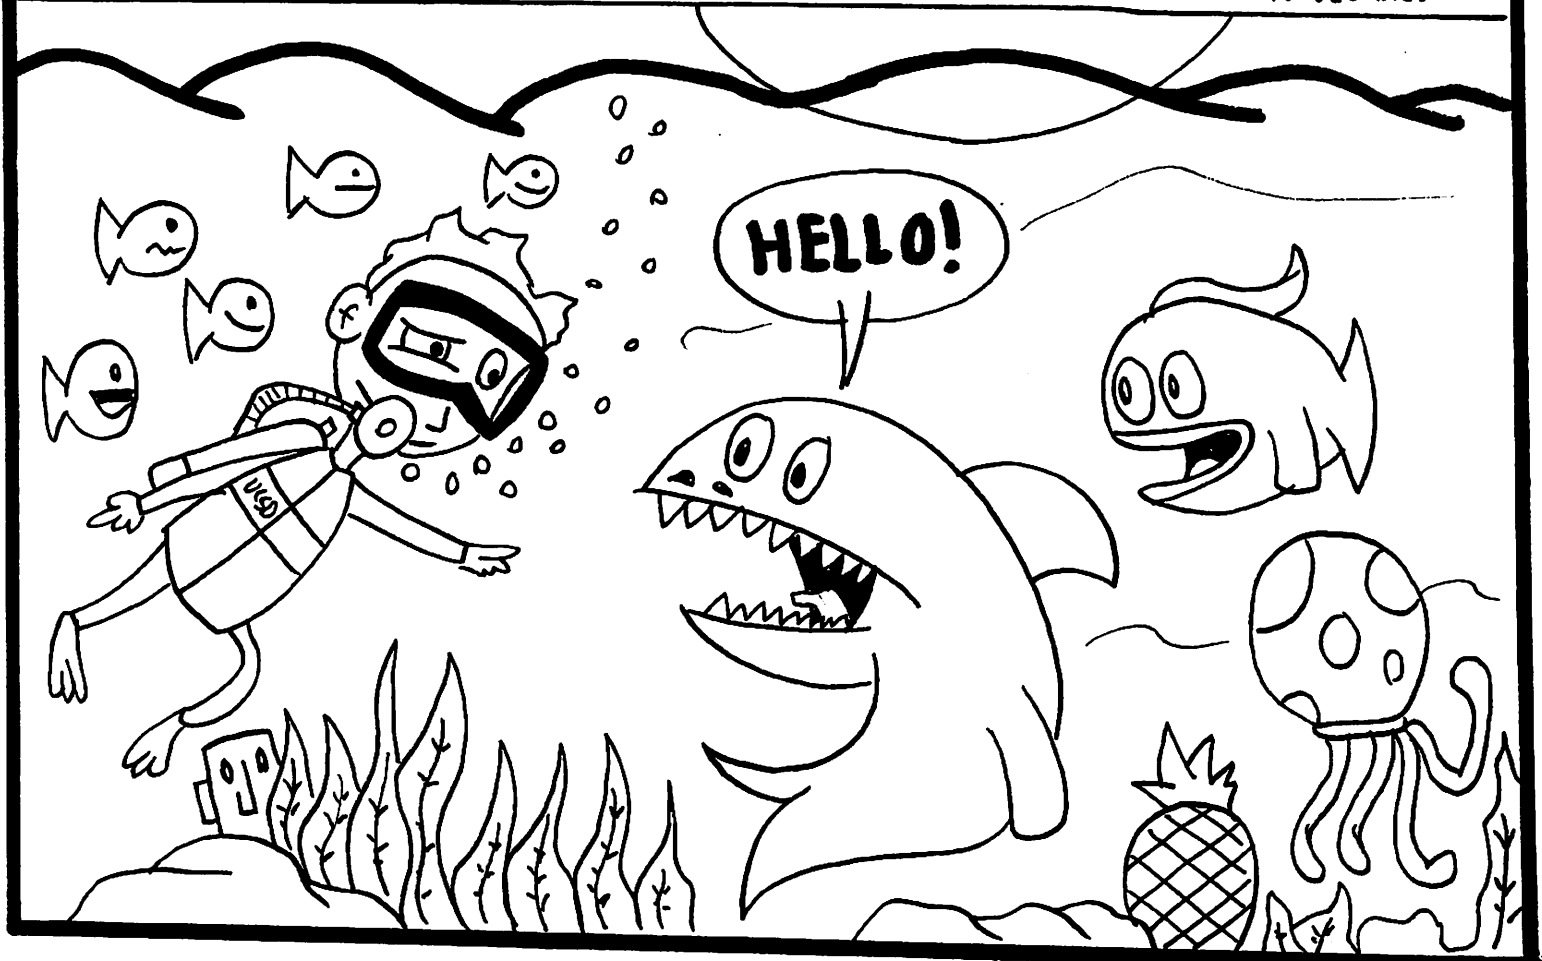

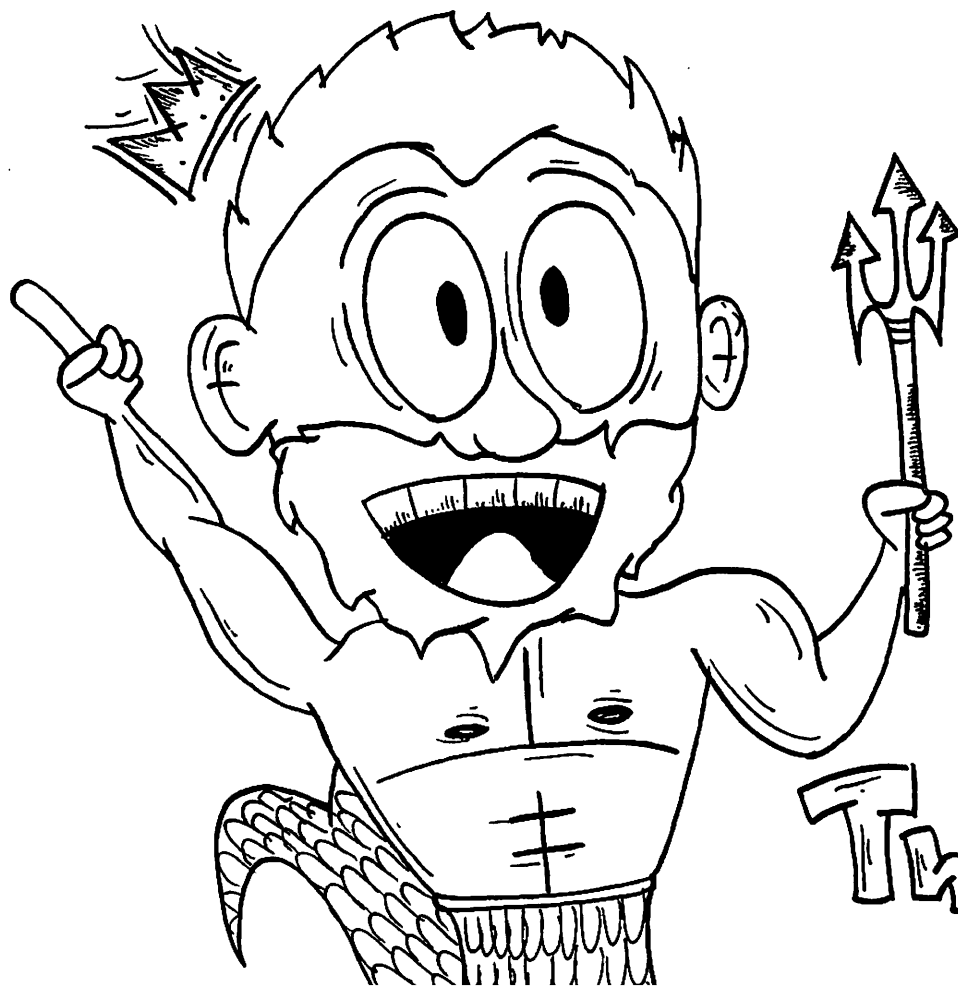

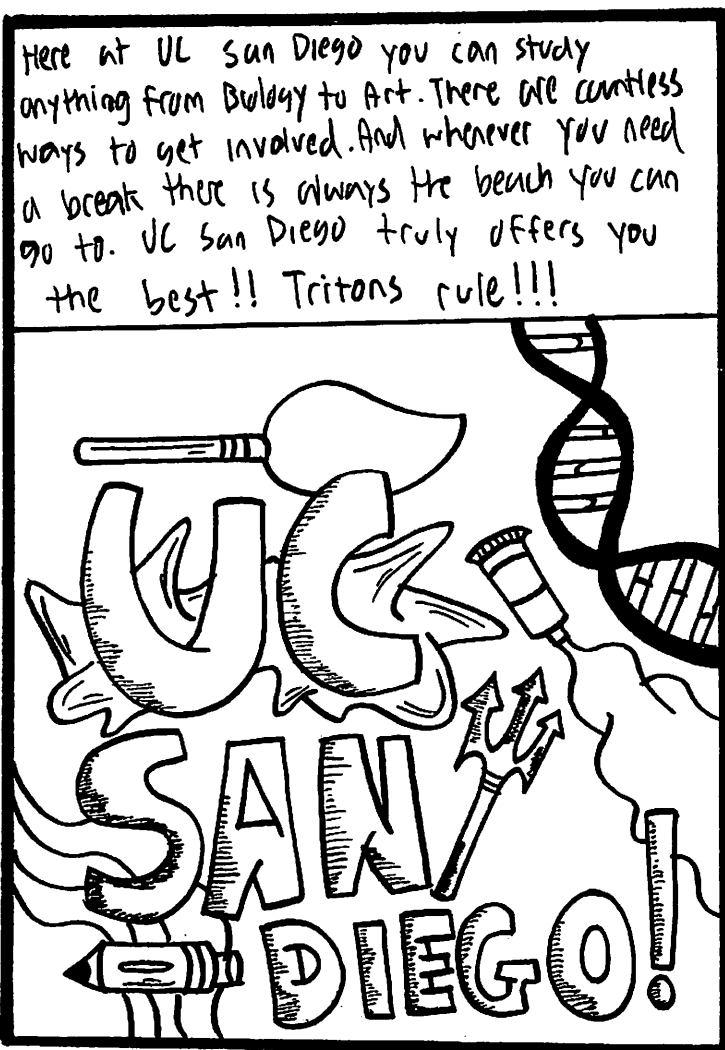

Price Center has many different places for students to eat. It is also where many organizations hold their weekly meetings. Price Center is a very popular place to be.

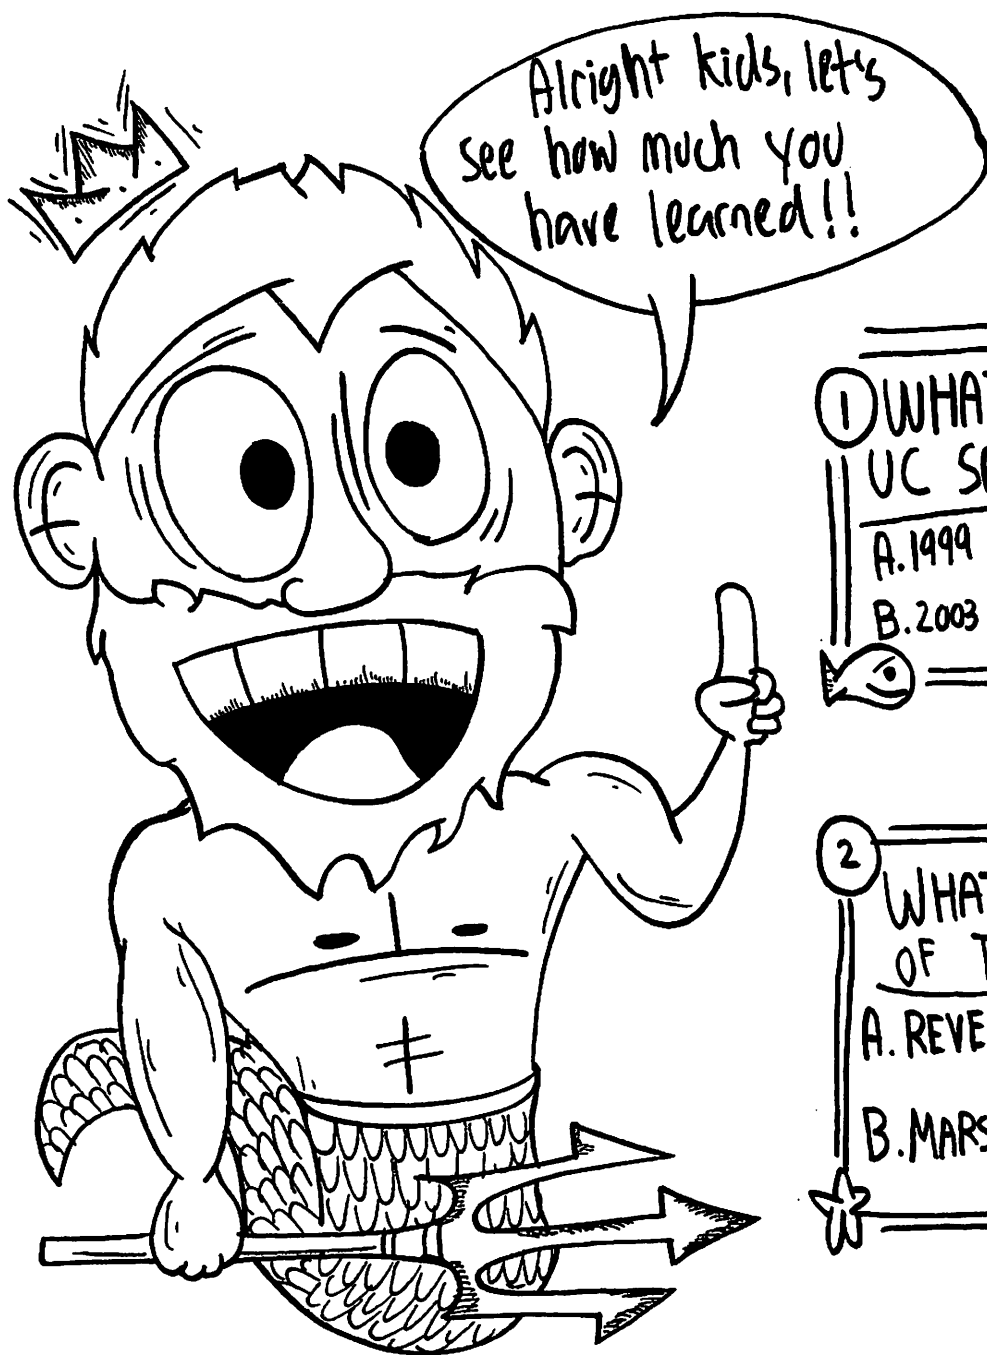

Also along the beach is the Scripps Institution of Oceanography which is one of the most important centers for ocean and Earth science research and education in the world. A lot of very important studies take place here that help the world's oceans.

The End!
